Good evening, Mahwah Families:

As we anticipate our first day of remote learning for our students tomorrow morning, I wanted to take a moment to sincerely thank all of you for your support in our district's efforts in preparing for meaningful learning for our students as they remain home.

Certainly, we are approaching uncharted waters here instructionally, but our staff members have risen to the occasion, preparing quality learning opportunities through a variety of non-traditional and creative instructional approaches.

Know that, just as if school were physically in session, you and your children are not alone. Our staff members will be in touch, and will be available to you regularly to provide quality instruction and support. Administrators and teachers are only an e-mail away, and as a district, we will make conscious efforts to make this as personalized an experience as possible for you and your children.

We will get through these unexpected circumstances together.

Thank you for your ongoing support as we move to remote learning as a school district. Our staff members remain excited, despite this sudden shift! In the meantime, enjoy this valuable time with your children, as well.

There is no closer home/school connection as what we will be experiencing in the coming weeks!

We will have our technology staff members available both virtually and physically on campus for our students, as detailed in our preparedness plan for you. Please reference our preparedness plan found on our website, as it will be updated with resources as we continue through our weeks of remote instruction.

Sincerely,

C. Lauren Schoen, Ed.D.
